Contents

Acknowledgments vii
Foreword ix

Introduction 1

Catholicism and Democracy: Conflict, Change, and Collaboration 15
J. Bryan Hehir, Georgetown University

Christianity and Democracy in Europe 31
Wolfgang Huber, Ruprecht-Karls-Universität, Heidelberg

Christianity and Democracy in Europe: The Christian Democratic Movement 47
Roberto Papini, Instituto International "Jacques Maritain," Rome

"In Common Together": Christianity and Democracy in America 65
Jean Bethke Elshtain, Vanderbilt University

Toward a Contemporary Christian Democratic Politics in the United States 85
James W. Skillen, Center for Public Justice
A number of colleagues have contributed generously to the completion of this volume. I would like to thank Ms. Marie Warren for her swift typing and retyping of the manuscript, Ms. M. Christian Green and Dr. Bruce P. Frohnen for their able and ample research assistance, and Ms. Eliza Ellison for her careful editing and copyediting.

This volume is one product of an ongoing project on Christianity and democracy undertaken by the Law and Religion Program at Emory University. I owe an enormous debt of gratitude to Howard O. Hunter, Dean of the Emory Law School, and James T. Laney, President of Emory University, for their enthusiastic support of this project, as well as to the members of the Emory University Committee on Law and Religion for their invaluable collaboration on it. On behalf of the Law and Religion Program, I wish to thank The Pew Charitable Trusts, and their program directors, Dr. Joel Carpenter and Dr. Kevin Quigley, for their gracious and unstinting support of our efforts.

John Witte, Jr.